

Steel Producers to Threaten "Trust" With Price-Cutting War

WASHINGTON—A new war is in the making behind the scenes in the strife-scarred steel industry.

This particular struggle is not, however, a conflict with labor. The brewing battle is among the steel moguls themselves over the issue of high price maintenance.

A number of the younger, independent companies, led by Republic and Weirton, both giants in their own right, are taking the position that steel prices should be drastically cut so as to step up consumption.

A high volume of production on a reduced margin of profit, they argue, is better business than a small output at high price.

The independents forced a slash in prices last Spring. Now they are talking of still further pruning.

If the giants of the old-line corporations—commonly known as "The Trust"—refuse to go along with such a policy, and the independents put up a fight, the country will witness a spectacular and unprecedented battle.

Production Control

Avalon E. Hall, Republican opponent of North Carolina's Democratic Representative, Walter Lambeth, hasn't a chance to be elected.

But he can solace himself with having pulled one of the best lines in this year's campaigns.

Throughout his electioneering, Hall was grievously handicapped by the lack of a personal issue against his opponent. Then, quite unexpectedly, Lambeth presented him with one.

Lambeth's wife gave birth to twins and Hall grabbed his opportunity.

In his next speech he orated as follows:

"I hear my opponent has just become the father of twins. Well, I want to congratulate him. Twice, in fact. First, on his bountiful parenthood, secondly on his good luck that the Roosevelt administration is not enforcing production control on children.

"If it were, it would just be too bad for Lambeth. He would have to plow one of the twins under."

Going Up

Broad-shouldered Donald R. Richberg is still climbing skyward in power in the President's inner group of advisers.

This is the true significance behind the recent executive order consolidating the Executive Council and the National Emergency Council, with Richberg at the head of the new unit.

There are two other items in the order whose weighty importance in coming events is known to only a few on the inside.

The first was the broad power bestowed on Richberg to select the field and headquarters personnel of the consolidated agency without regard to civil service requirements.

This means that Richberg has been entrusted with the task of organizing a staff that can reach into every sizable community in the country, and be beholden directly to the White House.

The second was the detailed enumeration of the many functions of the new Council, and particularly the statement that it will "co-operate with any Federal agency in performing such activities as the President may direct."

What this means is that Richberg, in effect, becomes a sort of cabinet member-at-large.

Keep your eyes on this bright young man and his new "department." Once the election is out of the way things will begin to happen.

Chance Brains

It was pure chance which gathered some of the President's Brain Trust together, and it was pure chance which dispersed them.

Professor Moley, the first man in the picture, got to know Roosevelt when the latter was Governor of New York.

Methodist Anniversary Program is Underway

The anniversary program of the Methodist Episcopal church was well underway with two services being held Sunday.

More than 200 took communion at the Sunday morning service with special music being provided by Miss Betty Scothorn, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Martin Cromley.

Rev. C. L. Correll, a former pastor, now of Ettricks, Va., attended.

The Sunday evening service was a community affair with Mayor W. B. Cady speaking on "The Effects of Church Life upon Civic Life," and Reed Shafer, president of the Chamber of Commerce, discussing the Golden Rule in business.

Ray W. Davis, prosecuting attorney, discussed the first religious movements in the county among its early settlers. Davis' address, which was well received by the audience, traced the formation of the county and told of its early religious activities.

The church's vested choir directed by Mrs. J. P. Moffitt and accompanied by Hunter Chambers sang at both morning and evening services.

Monday evening's program starting at 7:30 includes addresses by Rev. H. O. Harbaugh, Rev. L. C. McCardish, Rev. C. L. Thomas and Mrs. Grace Ritz. Dr. Correll will also speak at the service.

Music will be a feature of this evening's program with Dr. R. F. Lilly's choir, which performed several years ago, in the choir loft. The organ will be played by Miss Anna Schleyer and Mrs. K. J. Herrmann, both former organists of the church.

Services are planned each evening except Saturday with the highlight of the week coming next Sunday afternoon when the combined choirs of Washington C. H. come here.

PLEA FOR SCHOOLS MADE BY DIRECTOR

COLUMBUS, Nov. 5.—The cry of "Save our Schools" arose in a swelling chorus in Ohio today as educational interests for approval of special school levies and defeat of the proposed amendments limiting use of motor taxes to highway construction at tomorrow's elections.

Dr. B. O. Skinner, state director of education, and Joseph W. Fichter, assistant director, and the Ohio Education Association all issued statements asking for support of the voters tomorrow to "keep the schools open," in the words of Fichter.

REPLY TO HAYNES

Fichter's statement came in the form of a reply to State Sen. Haynes of Coshocton, who had attacked the assistant director for comparing the condition of Zanesville schools with highway construction work there.

The assistant director had declared that "elimination of a curve was being made at Zanesville" while the schools faced the possibility they may have to close Friday afternoon. Fichter urged defeat of the proposed amendments and support of the 775 special levies that will be voted on tomorrow.

"If the two proposed amendments are adopted," he said in the statement, "$20,000,000 will be lost to relief needs and to schools. We cannot afford to lose that amount now, but should retain it until a satisfactory program is completed.

"In normal times there might be some argument for using gas-tax money for such purposes."

Pickaway-co as well as Buckeye state political candidates rested their cases with the jury, the voters, today from whom the verdict is expected late tomorrow.

Two and one-half million will vote in Ohio.

That verdict will determine whether Democratic officials will continue to rule Pickaway-co or whether Republicans will make inroads into the county positions.

At present there is only one Republican office holder in the county, that being Prosecutor Ray W. Davis, who goes into his second term unopposed.

WESLEYAN TOPS BAA

Contest Between Ohio U. and Cincinnati May Have Important Bearing on Result; Bobcats Lose Tough One to West Virginia; C. U. Beats Marshall.

By GILSON WRIGHT
DELAWARE, Nov. 5.—A repetition of last year's bitter battle is expected Saturday at Athens when Ohio Wesleyan and Cincinnati meet in the only Buckeye conference game of the week.
The other three teams meet non-conference eleven. Ohio Wesleyan, perched in top position in the Buckeye, will play the unbeaten Denison team at Delaware. Miami will go to Wittenberg, and Marshall will be host to Emory-Henry at Huntington.
OHIO'S HOMECOMING
Cincinnati eked out a 2 to 0 win over the Bobcats in last year's game, a defeat that cost Ohio the championship. Ohio hasn't forgotten that heartbreaking loss, and coupled with the fact that Saturday will be homecoming at Athens, the Bobcats are expected to put up their best front.
Cincinnati and Ohio apparently a 10 to 6 score at Oxford last Saturday in a game which further elevated John Turley among the gridiron greats of the state. Although a marked man, Turley scored all of Ohio Wesleyan's points with a touchdown, a point after touchdown, and a field goal, his fourth of the season. He has made 75 points.

Both the Ohio Wesleyan-Miami and Cincinnati-Marshall games were marred by a driving rain in the third and fourth quarters, otherwise more scoring might have resulted.
Ohio, going outside the state to play West Virginia university at Parkersburg, lost a tough one, 7 to 2, but showed that it still has a team that will be dangerous in the Buckeye.

BEARS AND LIONS STILL LEAD PROS

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Chicago Bears and Detroit Lions still dominated the National Professional football league today, each eleven being undefeated in eight starts.
The eastern division of the league took it on the chin again yesterday, losing all three inter-sectional games played. The New York Giants, boasting a string of five straight victories and leading the eastern division, were swamped at Chicago by the Champion Bears, 27 to 7. Detroit routed Pittsburgh, 40 to 7, and Green Bay washed Boston, 10 to 0, at the Hub.
Pittsburgh's touchdown against Detroit, on a pass from Vaughn to Skladany, former All-American end from Pitt, was the first score made against the Lions this season. Ernie Caddell, former Stanford star, made three touchdowns.
Clark Hinkle's field goal from the 41-yard line in a driving rain featured Green Bay's victory.
The Brooklyn-Cardinals and Cincinnati-Philadelphia games were postponed.

CHICAGO IS NEXT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 5.—Hardly ruffled from their 76 to 9 runaway against Western Reserve Saturday, Ohio State's gridiron gallopers today took up where they left off for the Cleveland breather and began a series of intensive drills for a visit from the University of Chicago this week-end.
The Chicago encounter next Saturday, which will be the first meeting of the two schools in a football game in Ohio Stadium here in the last six years, is expected to be one of the best games of the season.
Chicago and Ohio play practically the same kind of football. Their offenses are their best defenses. In addition, each team boasts a potential all-American backfield man—Jay Berwanger for the Maroons, and Dick Heekin for the Buckeyes.
Besides these inducements, both teams will be battling for a mathematical chance at the Western Conference crown.

REES, END, INJURED

COLUMBUS, Nov. 5.—X-ray pictures to determine the seriousness of an injury to Trevor Rees, Ohio State varsity end from Dover, O., were to be taken at University hospital here today.
Rees was admitted to the hospital Sunday when it was found he was suffering from a back injury received early in the Western Reserve game at Cleveland Saturday.
Hospital attaches reported Rees resting easily today.
He is a junior in the college of education at Ohio State.

WEDS AT 12:10 A. M.

DENVER—Ten minutes past midnight was the time chosen by Mrs. Helen Johnson McKay for her marriage to Elmer L. Metcalfe. "I believe that 12:10 a. m. is my lucky hour," she said. It was the exact time of her birth.

Amount of butter in storage increased four million pounds in September. The trend is usually the other way during the fall season.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

WHITE A FACTOR

John Turley does nearly all of Ohio Wesleyan's scoring, by either running, passing or kicking; therefore he received publicity plus. But the boy opposing grid teams fear is none other than Howard White. Turley scored all ten of Wesleyan's points against Miami, Saturday, winning 10-6, but it was White's fault that Miami's score was not bigger.

PRaised BY EXPERTS

His kicking was the highlight of the ball game—He booted the pigskin out of bounds on the Miami 6, 7 and 9 yard lines in the first half and once got off a kick that was downed by his ends on the one-yard stripe. In the last period when the ball was heavy with mud, the field was a lake and the Miami line was driving hard trying to score a second touchdown. White was forced to kick from the vicinity of his own goal line several times. Nearly every boot traveled to midfield. The boys in the press box, including Tay Brown, former USC all-American tackle; Angus King, coach of Cincinnati Withrow and scouting for his brother, Dana, who coaches Cincinnati university; Butch Grover, Ohio U. coach and scout, and several others were high in their praise of White's kicking.

SAVATSKY TOUGH

He made Wesleyan's only long runs of the day getting away for 15 and 18 yards. Inability of his blockers to move the Miami end, Savatsky, prevented White from going farther more often—Dean, brother of the Bishop veteran played part of the second half for the winners.

PREDICTIONS BLASTED

The Second Guesser made 17 guesses on Saturday's games and the results were not so hot—Ten were correct; they were Ohio over Reserve; Cincinnati over Marshall; Wesleyan over Miami; Pitt over Notre Dame; Michigan state over Marquette; Minnesota over Michigan; Princeton over Harvard; Navy over Washington and Lee; Alabama over Kentucky; Purdue over Chicago—We picked Northwestern and Wisconsin to be a tie, Northwestern won; we also named Illinois and Army to tie, Illinois won; Downright mistakes were Auburn over Duke; Tennessee over Fordham, and Dartmouth over Yale, all ending vice versa; Ties, which according to national prognosticators, are accounted out, were Southern Methodist and Texas, and Iowa and Indiana.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED AT ARMISTICE DANCE

Earl Hood's band of Columbus, featuring Chester Nelson, the dancing director will furnish music from 9 until 1 o'clock. This orchestra won favor at one of the Country club dances last summer.

commission on county government, will be submitted to the governor shortly before Thanksgiving.

The report will contain three broad plans for reforms of county governments and will include a draft on proposed state legislation through which the three systems would be made available and optional to all counties throughout the state.

The systems to be recommended in the report are:

1. County manager.
2. Elective executives.
3. A set-up similar to that of a large school district.

Details of the plans are being carefully guarded by members of the commission prior to the publication of the report. The report is now more than half written, with parts of it being printed.

FOLLOW CITY STYLE

It was understood, however, that the county manager plan would follow the city manager system of government. The elective executives plan probably will parallel the present county commissioner system, the elective executives being given more central powers.

The third plan, probably the most revolutionary of the three in the report, would provide a single executive at the head of a county. He would be aided by assistants and an advisory council, of some nature, following the plan of school districts with a school superintendent and board of education.

A STATEMENT to the Public from Ed. Wallace's Bakery Concerning their "NEW" Bread

As each day passes we strive to make our bread just a little better in some way. If new equipment is obtainable that will improve our product, we get it.

In the last two months we have purchased new pans and new machinery and as a result we are now making one of the BEST loaves of bread we have EVER offered the public. This new machinery was bought purposely to bring you this new loaf of bread. A new formula is now used in making our bread, and entirely new methods are employed that has never been used in this locality before. It is not only different in texture but it has more body and a finer taste than ever. This new bread also makes a better toast than ever before. Try a slice or two toasted one of these cool mornings and we feel sure you'll agree with us that it is BETTER!

At this time, too, we are pleased to announce that Mr. Harry Van Trees, formerly of Indianapolis, Ind., is now superintendent in charge of baking in our plant. Support the Democratic Candidates

(An Editorial)

Pickaway-co's voters will go to the polls Tuesday to elect a corps of county officials as well as play their part in the selection of a governor, various administrative heads of the state government, a congressman, representative to the General Assembly and several state, district and local judges.

With the Democratic party this year presenting a fine slate of candidates for every office from governor to corner, the matter of success lies in getting the Democratic vote to the polls.

By Democratic vote is not meant just those partisans who are usually Democrats, but along with them the men and women who are independent voters and Republicans who progressively recognize that the Democratic party is the people's party.

The Herald believes it is a newspaper's duty to speak its mind about candidates for public office. And because we believe that Ohio and Pickaway-co will be better served by the Democratic candidates The Herald is endorsing the entire Democratic slate.

A careful examination of both party tickets has revealed to the The Herald that the election of the Democratic slate will insure our county and state of a straight-forward, honest and efficient administration of government during the next two years.

At the head of its ticket the Democrats have placed Martin L. Davey, a shrewd, business-like candidate, who is characterized by his frank and straight-forward manner of speaking on all important questions of the day. His experience as a legislator for 12 years in Congress and his many years of business activity combine to make him worthy of the trust of being governor of Ohio.

Vic Donahey will undoubtedly be elected to the U. S. Senate. The Herald believes that his record entitles him to be elected.

Congressman Mel G. Underwood deserves re-election. He has served his district well and has never lost sight of the fact that he is a representative of the people.

Each of the other Democratic state candidates is well-fitted for the job asked. All of them should be supported.

In the county the Democratic ticket presents a list of worthy candidates and each should be elected. Those who are up for re-election have served the county well and their majorities at the election Tuesday should be large ones.

It is now the duty of every Democrat to go to the polls Tuesday and vote the straight Democratic ticket.

When this is done victory is certain and Pickaway-co will remain in the Democratic fold where it should always remain.

DEATH SONG

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

CHAPTER XXXVI

I listened dazedly as the sheriff called Birch Cottage, to which James Ruxton had moved. I heard him repeat to Ruxton the damning indictment Mark had recited. I could imagine easily enough the banker's incredulous, then fearful, protests. If Loren were convicted, I thought, James Ruxton would not want to live.

When the sheriff had hung up, he said, "He asked me to wait here a few minutes until he can get dressed and come up."

Mark nodded. He stared at the ceiling, as if his mind were far away. Then abruptly he sat up.

"Don't wait for him!" he cried.

The sheriff stared at him.

"Go down to his cottage!" Mark said frantically. "If you want to save his life, get right down there!"

"What do you mean?" Finn demanded.

"For heaven's sake, don't argue," Mark cried. "Oh, Lord, if I had a pair of legs! Leave Loren with John, and get right down there."

His conviction was so compelling that I started from the room. As I opened the door Loren cursed Mark and leaped at him. John Calvert caught his arms. I ran down the corridor, the sheriff after me. In the hot sunshine, we panted across the lawn to Birch Cottage.

When we opened the door of his room, James Ruxton was sitting at his desk, in pajamas and a dressing gown, writing. He turned as we burst in. His face was ghastly. He seized a revolver on the leaf of the desk.

Finn's lunge carried him across the room, crashing into Ruxton's chair. The two men fell to the floor and the revolver went spinning against the wall. Running after them, I looked at the sheet of paper on the desk. On it Ruxton had written:

"I, James Ruxton, killed Seifert Vail. I did it to save the life of my nephew, Loren, for Vail would most certainly have killed him had he learned—"

"I must be developing a conscience," Mark said. "I'm still feeling mean about the trick I played on Loren. But I had to do it. The only way I could respond to him was through that book which meant more to him than anything else in the world."

He lay back on his pillows, watching the sun go down behind the mountains. Supper was over, and it was growing cool on the porch where Sue, John Calvert, the sheriff and I sat with him. A robin was singing its evening song; for the first time since Seifert Vail was killed, the end of day brought rest and tranquility.

James Ruxton was in the county jail at Cold Valley. He had dictated and signed a complete confession.

"There's a lot of things I want to know," Finn said. "The first one is how you knew Loren was the fellow who stole Vail's wife."

"The day after the murder," Mark answered. "I learned that Loren spoke Spanish, and I tried mine out on him. He told me he picked up the language in Cuba, but he used two words that you never hear outside of Catalonia. He called Felipe 'una hembra formidable,' meaning a young lady who is a compendium of all the feminine virtues. A Cuban would have said 'contudente' never 'formidable' and Loren used the Catalan slang word 'moy' meaning 'fellow' or 'old boy.' Obviously, he was trying to conceal the fact that he had lived in Catalonia."

"When the Montague woman told us that Francine Vail and her lover had run off to Barcelona, I knew why. Of course, long before that I'd been suspicious of his uncle."

"But why did you suspect him?" Sue asked. "It still seems unbelievable to me that a man like Mr. Ruxton could commit two such terrible murders."

"Perhaps if he hadn't been a sick man, he wouldn't have been a murderer," John Calvert said.

"You're almost as smart as I am," Mark said. "James Ruxton isn't legally insane, but acute melancholia darkens his whole outlook on life. The one thing he wanted to do before he died was to assure Loren's happiness. He turned to the sheriff. 'When I talked you into arresting Loren, for which I hope you'll pardon me,' Finn broke in. 'I had a pretty good idea what you were up to.'"

We all laughed, and he turned on us resentfully.

"Now, Mr. Finn!" Sue said. His frown became a sheepish, embarrassed grin. "All right, all right," he grumbled. "If you think I was fooled, let it go at that."

"When I accused Loren," Mark went on, "I attributed to him all the fears that drove his uncle to murder Vail. James Ruxton learned who Seifert Vail was, and undoubtedly he tried to persuade Loren to stop visiting him. But Loren had met Sue, and he couldn't stay away."

James Ruxton's greatest desire, then, was to see him married and safely away. Undoubtedly Loren would have been in real danger if Vail discovered who he was. James Ruxton's morbid imagination exaggerated that danger until it became a fear that haunted him all ways."

"He became obsessed by the idea that there was disaster ahead and that he might have to kill Vail to save Loren. And, because he was a cautious, far-seeing man, he prepared for that unhappy possibility. When Vail asked him to exchange rooms, Ruxton learned from him that he was expecting a visit from his wife. To James Ruxton, there seemed nothing to do but to carry out that long-planned murder."

"You haven't answered Sue's question, Mark," Dr. Calvert said. "All that is quite clear now, but why did you first suspect Ruxton?"

"There were several things. The first was a cold in the chest."

He grinned at our amazement. "A few days after Joe Barker was found drowned, it was discovered that Ruxton had been trying to conceal the fact that he had caught cold. His explanation was that he had an engagement to go out to dinner with Sue and Loren, and he didn't want to miss it. He looked quizzically at his useless legs. 'I can quite understand what a rare privilege that would be for anyone here—to get out of the sanatorium for an evening—but it seemed to me that to a man as careful as Ruxton, health would come first.'"

"It was apparent by that time that Joe had neither drowned accidentally nor committed suicide. He had been murdered. It seemed to be a singularly cold-blooded and unnecessary crime. Why would anyone want to kill Joe? Only to make it appear that Joe was guilty and had committed suicide, to close the investigation and get rid of the sheriff. But we were getting nowhere, and no one except a man harassed by unreasonable fears, an over-cautious man, would have done such a thing."

"It was not difficult for Ruxton to speak to Joe during the one day the gardener was at liberty and to persuade him that Felipe had drowned herself in the lake because she had killed Vail. Poor, simple-minded Joe, believing him, trusting him, and out of his room, got the grappling hook from the tool shed and went out at night to help Ruxton drag the lake."

"Ruxton simply pushed him overboard, trusting in the grappling hook to pull him down. But Joe upset his calculations by clutching at the boat and Ruxton had to break his finger to beat him off. During that grim adventure, Ruxton became chilled and caught cold. Then, being too careful again, he tried to conceal it for fear someone would leap to the improbable conclusion that he had caught it drowning Joe."

We were silent for a minute and then I asked, "Was that all the proof you had, Mark?"

"Oh, no," he said. "I found plenty more when I began to consider Ruxton as a possibility. He lit a cigarette. 'The most logical suspects, of course, were the surviving patients in Lakeside Cottage. Gross was too afraid of hurting his precious heart to commit a murder, much as he hated Vail. Clendening lacked the courage. Only Ruxton seemed to me to combine the intelligence, physical capacity, strength of will and especially the caution of the murderer.'"

"It was evident that the murderer was a patient, confined to the sanatorium grounds but able to move around freely during exercise periods, as Ruxton was. The proof of that was the murderer's taste in weapons. A pair of hedge shears! What a clumsy, ridiculous instrument of murder! If they hadn't been found with the gardener's overalls, they would have seemed completely fantastic. How much easier for the murderer to conceal a knife under the overalls. Obviously the author of the crime had to build it out of such materials as he could find here."

He turned to John Calvert with a smile. "That eliminated you, with a hundred nice sharp surgeon's knives to choose from, and Loren, who could easily have gone to New York and picked up a better weapon. Of course, the two of you complicated the case as much as you could, but I'll forgive you for that."

"Stupid of me," John Calvert said. "I should have had as much confidence in your intelligence as you have."

"Strangely enough," Mark went on, "Clendening, with his childish idea that there was some code message in the words of 'Waiting For You,' with his everlasting nosiness, helped to pin the murder on Ruxton. The day he dropped dead from excitement, he found outside the cottage the button which was missing from the overalls. Did Ruxton tell you where he put the overalls after the murder?"

Finn nodded. "He went back around the house, peeled them off, shoved them under the porch and then climbed back through his window. That night he dropped them in the lake."

"The fact that the button was found so near the cottage pointed again to someone who lived there. If the murderer had been from any other part of the sanatorium, he wouldn't have taken off his disguise and walked home in plain sight without it."

"Ruxton realized that, and again he tried to be too careful. He insisted that someone had attacked Clendening, or at least frightened him. He said that because, for once, he had an alibi. Cross had been in the room with him when Clendening died."

"There was one final thing. If, as I believed, the murder had some connection with the visit Vail expected and with the phonograph record that was playing when he was found, then Ruxton had to be the murderer—for he was admittedly the only person who knew why Vail asked to change rooms with him."

"Once we found the Montague woman and established Loren's connection with Vail, it was perfectly clear, but I had to frame Loren so that you, sheriff, believed the story. It sounded plausible enough, and you and his own fears convinced Ruxton. He saw everything falling to pieces. He had killed to save Loren, and now Loren himself was accused, and there seemed to be a damnably complete circumstantial case against him. There was nothing for Ruxton to do, loving the boy as he did, but write a confession and kill himself while we waited for him in my room."

"When I told of the attempt on my life, Loren realized what I was doing. Did you see the look of horror on his face? He had told his uncle that Bob was going to the city, and when I accused him, he knew that his uncle was a murderer."

Finn stood up. "Well," he said, "I'm glad to get a confession. I'd hate to have to go to court without one." He pulled a cigar from his pocket and reflectively bit off the end. "I promised the reporters a story, and now I got it."

"Don't use my name," Mark said.

"What?" Finn asked. "Here's your back and solve a murder and don't want any credit for it?"

Mark grinned. "And have reporters bothering me for a month? No, that grief goes with your job. The credit's all yours. I hope it gets you into the Assembly."

Finn squinted Mark's head. He said warmly, "If I'm elected and you ever need anything, you know where to come!"

John and Sue arose as the sheriff left. "It's my turn to thank you now," the doctor said. "Mark."

"I'll let Sue thank me for both of you," Mark said. "Come here, sweetheart, and give us one last kiss."

She walked to him proudly and put her arms around him. When she straightened up, Mark said gayly, "I get another good wedding, don't I?" John and Sue, the moon's risen. Take Sue for a walk. You've got a lot of time to make up."

When they had gone, I said, "Your murder mystery's over, and your nurse is going to marry the doctor. Where does that leave you?"

"Right in bed where I started," Mark said. He leaned toward me, and his eyes were gleaming. "I've got a wov of an idea for my next play. Bob. Listen."

Hardening of Arteries Is Due to Faulty Living

Particularly in Cases of Premature "Arteriosclerosis", Says Authority

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

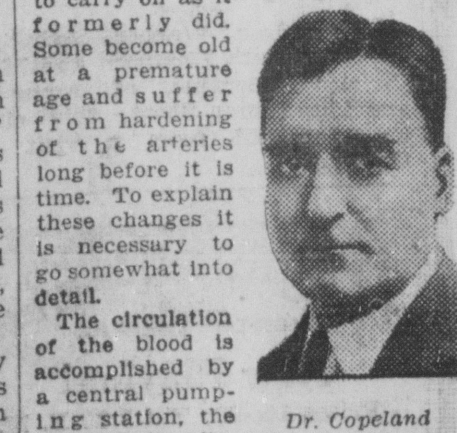

AS WE GROW old the arteries become hard. The heart is weakened and the delicate mechanism of the body becomes impaired. It is unable to carry on as it formerly did. Some become old at a premature age and suffer from hardening of the arteries long before it is time. To explain these changes it is necessary to go somewhat into detail.

The circulation of the blood is accomplished by a central pumping station, the heart; the distributing system, or arteries; the terminal endings of the arterial system within all the tissues, called capillaries; and the collecting system, or veins. Each part of the circulation system is dependent upon all the others. An injury or disease of one part will affect the entire system.

Like Pipelines

The blood vessels are often called pipelines. The walls of these pipes are made of elastic and muscular tissue. They contract and expand. With each beat of the heart there is created a propulsion which maintains the necessary pressure, forcing the blood on its way. This causes its circulation throughout the body.

These pipes are resistant to the changes and strains experienced by the body. As long as their health and strength are maintained, they are equal to all emergencies. If they become diseased they are unable to do so. They soon weaken and become inefficient.

Hardening of the arteries or "arteriosclerosis", as it is termed medically, is the most common disease of these vessels. In this condition the arteries lose their elasticity because of the deposits of lime are laid down in the walls of the vessels and they become hard and brittle.

May Follow Infectious Disease

When these changes occur the blood vessels no longer assist in the circulation of blood. In fact, by the narrowing of their calibre, they retard the flow of blood, placing additional work on the heart. The blood being restricted by the lessened space within the vessels, is under greater pressure. Since the vessels are brittle and inelastic they are liable to rupture under the progressive increase of blood pressure. No longer are they able to resist strain.

The fundamental cause of hardening of the arteries in fairly young individuals is difficult to explain. It is probably the result of intense and faulty living, undue nervous strain, over-eating and elastic tissue of the arteries. Localized infections, the result of diseased tonsils, infected teeth and nasal sinuses are other factors that must not be overlooked. Correction of underlying physical defects, with a well ordered life, will prevent premature hardening of the arteries.

Do These in One or Many Colors Kitchen Towels

PATTERN

Do you want something different in your kitchen? Get these Mammy towels and be the envy of all your friends! They're fun to embroider—you can be just as gay in color as you please, or let one color alone do the trick. The motifs are entirely in cross stitch—8 to the inch—so you can see they'll be done quickly. They'd certainly delight someone if they found them under the Christmas tree. And what a hit they'd make at the bazaar. Something different for a change and yet practical.

In pattern 5250 you will find a transfer pattern of seven motifs averaging 5 1/2 x 7 1/2 inches; material requirements and color schemes.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

The generations of people both young and old who have been thrilled by "Treasure Island," Robert Louis Stevenson's famous story of pirate adventure, will find the vivid story-book experiences of their youth created on the screen in the picture that opened yesterday at the Cliftona Theatre, with Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in co-starring roles.

Full power of the most widely read fiction book about pirates ever written has been retained in the adaptation by John Lee Mahin. Scenes have been reproduced exactly as described in the book much of Stevenson's own dialogue between the characters followed to the word.

With Beery as Long John Silver and Jackie Cooper as Jim Hawkins, boy adventurer, a cast has been assembled to bring each rover of the Spanish Main to the screen with living reality.

SHE'S FREE ANYWAY

ATLANTA, Ga.—Bessie Young cannot have a divorce, the reason being, in the decision of the state supreme court, that she hasn't been married. The high court reversed a decision of a superior judge awarding Miss Young a "divorce" decree from Cleveland Simpson. She wanted alimony, too.

ernor of New York, and when Moley was serving on his crime commission.

Professor Tugwell happened to get into the picture because he lived near Moley at Columbia University. Moley asked him to work out some economic ideas for Roosevelt.

Adolf Berle happened to join the group because he gave a talk at the Harvard Club one night; afterward drafted a memorandum of the discussion and sent it to those who were present. One of them happened to show it to Moley. Another to Colonel House. Both showed it to the Presidential candidate.

"I'd like to meet that man," said Roosevelt. So Berle was initiated into the Brain Trust.

Later he brought with him Charles Taussig for whom Berle served as attorney.

Thus the family grew. And in somewhat the same way, the past year has seen the little group gradually disintegrate.

LOST 20 LBS. OF FAT IN JUST 4 WEEKS

Mrs. Nae West of St. Louis, Mo. writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Folk should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drugstore—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

Wallace Beery

Sponsored by 12 local merchants, the Cliftona Theatre and The Herald.

The Contest Editor was "swamped" with replies. They started rolling in at 5 p. m. Friday, and a steady stream of letters poured into his office until late Friday night and all day Saturday.

The correct wording of the sentence is "Fifteen men on a dead man's chest, Yo Ho Ho and a bottle of rum." As usual, a number of contestants failed to include their name with their answer making impossible for them to be judged.

If your name appears in the list below call at The Herald office for your tickets. The tickets are subject to a 3c State amusement tax when presented at the theatre and may be used at any performance except on Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays.

And here's good news for non-winners in the contest and every other subscriber to The Herald. Starting about the middle of this week a number of theatre tickets will be given away each day to regular subscribers of this newspaper. Full details will be announced later, but here's a tip: keep an eye on the classified page of The Herald.

NEW DEAL FACES TEST IN TUESDAY VOTING

G. O. P. Hopes to Gain in House

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—An off-year campaign that has been apathetic in many states and red-hot in others came to a close today with the Democrats certain of retaining control of both branches of Congress, and the Republicans hopeful only of making an impressive showing against the New Deal.

By common consent, the New Deal is the single outstanding issue, so far as there can be said to be one. Yet the Republicans are resigned to its continuance.

30 MILLIONS TO VOTE

Registration the country over is at an unprecedented peak, totaling almost 48,000,000. Yet the leaders on both sides will be surprised tomorrow if the vote exceeds 30,000,000, or about 10,000,000 short of the record vote piled up in the Roosevelt-Hoover campaign of two years ago.

The vote tomorrow will determine the make-up of the 74th Congress, decide the political complexion of 33 state governments, through election of governors and state legislatures, and fill thousands of lesser offices, from mayor to township trustee.

Its greater significance, however, is the light it will throw on the temper of the country toward the history-making acts of the Roosevelt New Deal, as viewed in terms of the more important election in 1936.

The leaders on both sides are more interested in the phase of tomorrow's balloting than they are in the fate of individuals. As Henry A. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, described it: "This is but the preliminary skirmish in the battle of 1936." Meaning that the Republicans have no hope of upsetting Democratic control of the government at this time.

It has been a curious campaign in many respects. President Roosevelt has made no political speeches, and steadfastly refrained from endorsing any candidates save in his own state of New York, where an eleven-hour White House blessing was given Gov. Herbert H. Lehman. Ex-President Herbert Hoover, still titular leader of the Republican party, has been conspicuously silent.

In the House, Republican chances for gains are distinctly better. The present House line-up is 309 Democrats, 114 Republicans, 5 Farmer-Laborites, with 7 vacancies. Thus, the Republicans would have to pick up just short of 100 seats to gain numerical control, and that, they admit, is hopeless.

TRAFFIC TAKES 10

By International News Service
With thousands of Ohioans taking to the highways to enjoy what may be the last "perfect" day for joy riding this year, at least ten lives were snuffed out in violent accidents in the state over the week-end, a checkup by International News Service revealed today.

Miss Leona Kuntz, 24, and Royal Adams, 23, both of Chillicothe, were killed when their auto collided with a truck near Ironton. O. Bernard Crabtree, 10, died in a Gallipolis hospital from injuries received in a traffic accident, and Thomas O'Hare, 45, of Washington C. H., was struck and killed while walking on a highway 10 miles east of Washington C. H.

For STATE SENATOR

NOTE THE FOLLOWING EXCERPTS ABOUT HIM AS STATE SENATOR

"It has taken only a few months for Senator Paul R. Gingher of Columbus to progress from a legislative neophyte to one of the most outstanding members of the General Assembly. Ask any close observer of the workings of the Legislature about Paul Gingher and you will hear how he has come to be regarded as the bed-rock of that sometimes turbulent body, the Ohio Senate." Karl B. Pauly, Feature Writer for The Ohio State Journal.

"Senator Paul R. Gingher, Franklin County, has attracted attention as being the smoothest member in presenting a case to the Senate. The job is certain to be done logically and tactfully." Herbert R. Mengert in The Cincinnati Enquirer.

"In addition to being a quiet, forceful and dignified man on his feet as a Senator, he is a firm, capable and courteous official behind the gavel." Gongwer Legislative Reports.

"Franklin County's two present members of the Ohio Senate—Robert E. Pfeiffer and Paul R. Gingher—have given good service." Editorial, The Columbus Citizen.

line taxes for highway purposes only, but in an emergency we cannot justify such an argument with schools closing, cities facing bankruptcy, and relief and old age pension needs requiring immediate attention.

"No intelligent person would minimize the importance of good roads, but in the face of other urgent needs, certainly we can delay the elimination of curves and the widening of roads until we have found a way to keep the schools open during 1935, and to provide for other necessities of government."

campaigns Saturday evening with a rally at Memorial Hall with Paul Herbert, candidate for lieutenant governor, as the principal speaker. District and county candidates were also present with vocal music provided by the Franklin County Republican club's chorus.

The voters of Ohio will determine whether Republican Simeon Fess, arch foe of the Rooseveltian "New Deal," is to return to the U. S. senate for six more years or whether his senate seat will be occupied henceforth by Democrat Vic Donahey, who promises to "support the President, in every proper manner."

It also will determine whether Ohio's next governor will be Clarence J. Brown, Republican, who at the age of 28 became this state's youngest lieutenant governor—he is now 41, or whether the Democrats will continue to hold the reins of state government for another two years, with Martin L. Davey, tree surgeon and former congressman, in the driver's seat.

CONCEDE TO DONAHEY

Practically every political prognosticator in the state picked Donahey to win over Fess, who also has come out on the short end of all the newspaper straw vote polls taking in the entire state. The seers said the defeat they anticipated for Fess would be due not so much to his outspoken objection to the "New Deal" as to the great personal popularity of Donahey.

But that did not discourage the veteran Fess who has spent 22 consecutive years in the two houses of Congress.

"I am always beaten by straw votes, and elected by ballots," he said as he returned to his home in Yellow Springs after campaigning in every corner of the state.

The senator will drive to Columbus this afternoon to make his final appeal for re-election in a statewide radio broadcast.

Donahey, winner of the Democratic nomination over the avowed "New Deal" candidate, Congressman Charles West, and over Gov. George White, still suffered from a severe cold and remained in the seclusion of his home at Indian Lake.

Back in his home county, Davey wound up his campaign with speeches in Kent and Ravenna, while Brown, rounded out his third consecutive day in Cleveland with several campaign addresses.

Democratic state headquarters predicted victory for Donahey by a 300,000 majority, for Davey by a 175,000 majority. Republican headquarters said Brown would carry 68 of Ohio's 88 counties to win by 150,000. Fess will be re-elected, H. E. Griffith, G. O. P. campaign manager, predicted but he offered no estimate of his anticipated margin of victory.

VOTE ON 22

Ohio will elect 22 district congressmen and two congressmen-at-large. The general belief was that the Republicans would pick up several new seats, but few unbiased observers agreed with Griffith that eight would be gained. Most forecasters thought a gain of four seats by the Republicans would be more nearly correct.

who was first to greet and congratulate him on his memorable flight.

"I was only a spare part of the trip," Sir Charles added. "Bill (his navigator) did all the work." Anybody can get into a plane and fly. But it takes great skill to pick out the little dots on the map and find them, to hit them on the head as we did on this trip. That's the work my navigator did and we hit every little dot."

"I've got the best airplane in the world," Sir Charles boasted. "From the time of the takeoff at Honolulu, we had no trouble except for 15 minutes about 11 o'clock Saturday night when we bumped into a rainstorm. That necessitated a short period of blind flying."

"I don't remember what our position was at the time, but it was nothing like that 8,500-foot spin on our flight from Suva to Honolulu when the plane's wing flaps fell down."

"I flew at the start at an altitude of 6,000 feet and then went between 7,000 and 12,000 feet the rest of the way."

"We started out at 140 miles an hour, then hopped up to 189 miles and flew the last quarter of the flight at 125 miles an hour."

NOT COMMERCIAL ROUTE

Sir Charles declared he did not believe the time was ripe for a commercial airline over the route he had just flown.

"With the ships we have now," Sir Charles said, "by the time we have taken enough gasoline aboard for the long hops there is no margin left for a pay load sufficient to make a commercial proposition profitable. It will come eventually, but not for some time."

He said he did not favor use of dirigibles as he believed their initial costs too high and the pay load too small.

While the two flyers rested in seclusion today plans went forward for a banquet tonight when 200 Los Angeles dignitaries will honor Sir Charles and his companion at a banquet.

REPLY TO HAYNES
Fichter's statement came in the form of a reply to State Sen. Haynes, of Coshocton, who had attacked the assistant director for comparing the condition of Zanesville schools with highway construction work there.

The assistant director had declared that "elimination of a curve was being made at Zanesville" while the schools faced the possibility they may have to close Friday afternoon. Fichter urged defeat of the proposed amendments and support of the 775 special levies that will be voted on tomorrow.

"If the two proposed amendments are adopted," he said in the statement, "$20,000,000 will be lost to relief needs and to schools. We cannot afford to lose that amount now, but should retain it until a satisfactory program is completed."

WESLEYAN TOPS BAA

Contest Between Ohio U. and Cincinnati May Have Important Bearing on Result; Bobcats Lose Tough One to West Virginia; C. U. Beats Marshall.

By GILSON WRIGHT

DELAWARE, Nov. 5.—A repetition of last year's bitter battle is expected Saturday at Athens when Ohio Wesleyan and Cincinnati meet in the only Buckeye conference game of the week.

The other three teams meet non-conference eleven. Ohio Wesleyan, perched in top position in the Buckeye, will play the unbeaten Denison team at Delaware. Miami will go to Wittenberg, and Marshall will be host to Emory-Henry at Huntington.

OHIO'S HOME COMING

Cincinnati eked out a 2 to 0 win over the Bobcats in last year's game, a defeat that cost Ohio the championship. Ohio hasn't forgotten that heartbreaking loss, and coupled with the fact that Saturday will be homecoming at Athens, the Bobcats are expected to put up their best front.

Cincinnati and Ohio apparently are evenly matched, the former having defeated Marshall, 7 to 0, while Ohio won from Marshall, 8 to 0. However, Cincinnati did not have to cope with Marshall's famed John Zontini, who was on the sidelines with an injury, and Ohio therefore may be given an edge because of the apparent better showing against a common foe.

All eyes point to the Cincinnati-Ohio Wesleyan game at Cincinnati on Saturday, Nov. 17, as the one which may decide the championship. Riding the crest with two wins and no defeats the Bobcats can be assured of at least a tie for the title by winning from Cincinnati, which mathematically is tied for first place at present as a result of its one victory, that over Marshall, and no defeats in the Buckeye.

TURLEY SCORES 75

Ohio Wesleyan pushed aside Miami, co-champion last year, by a 10 to 6 score at Oxford last Saturday in a game which further elevated John Turley among the gridiron greats of the state. Although a muddled man, Turley scored all of Ohio Wesleyan's points with a touchdown, a point after touchdown, and a field goal, his fourth of the season. He has made 75 points.

Both the Ohio Wesleyan-Miami and Cincinnati-Marshall games were marred by a driving rain in the third and fourth quarters, otherwise more scoring might have resulted.

Ohio, going outside the state to play West Virginia university at Parkersburg, lost a tough one, 7 to 2, but showed that it still has a team that will be dangerous in the Buckeye.

BEARS AND LIONS STILL LEAD PROS

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Chicago Bears and Detroit Lions still dominated the National Professional football league today, each eleven being undefeated in eight starts.

The eastern division of the league took it on the chin again yesterday, losing all three inter-sectional games played. The New York Giants, boasting a string of five straight victories and leading the eastern division, were swamped at Chicago by the Champion Bears, 27 to 7. Detroit routed Pittsburgh, 40 to 7, and Green Bay washed Boston, 10 to 0, at the Hub.

Pittsburgh's touchdown against Detroit, on a pass from Vaughn to Skladany, former All-American end from Pitt, was the first score made against the Lions this season. Ernie Caddel, former Stanford star, made three touchdowns. Clark Hinkle, held goal from the 41-yard line in a driving rain, featured Green Bay's victory. The Brooklyn-Cardinals and Cincinnati-Philadelphia games were postponed.

CHICAGO IS NEXT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 5.—Hardly ruffled from their 76 to 9 runaway against Western Reserve Saturday, Ohio State's gridiron gallopers today took up where they left off for the Cleveland breather and began a series of intensive drills for a visit from the University of Chicago this week-end.

The Chicago encounter next Saturday, which will be the first meeting of the two schools in a football game in Ohio Stadium here in the last six years, is expected to be one of the best games of the season.

Chicago and Ohio play practically the same kind of football. Their offensives are their best defenses. In addition, each team boasts a potential all-American backfield man—Jay Berwanger for the Maroons, and Dick Hecklin for the Buckeyes.

Besides these inducements, both teams will be battling for a mathematical chance at the Western Conference crown.

Rees, end, injured

COLUMBUS, Nov. 5.—X-ray pictures to determine the seriousness of an injury to Trevor Rees, Ohio State varsity end from Dover, O., were to be taken at University hospital here today.

Rees was admitted to the hospital Sunday when it was found he was suffering from a back injury received early in the Western Reserve game at Cleveland Saturday.

Hospital attaches reported Rees resting easily today.

He is a junior in the college of education at Ohio State.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

WRITE A FACTOR

John Turley does nearly all of Ohio Wesleyan's scoring, by either running, passing or kicking, therefore he receives public notice. But the boy opposing grid teams, fear is none other than Howard White. * * * Turley scored all ten of Wesleyan's points against Miami, Saturday, winning 10-6, but it was White's fault that Miami's score was not bigger.

PRASED BY EXPERTS

His kicking was the highlight of the ball game—He booted the ball out of bounds on the Miami 6, 7 and 9 yard lines in the first half and once got off a kick that was downed by his ends on the one-yard stripe—in the last period when the ball was heavy with mud, the field was a lake and the Miami line was driving hard trying to score a second touchdown White was forced to kick from the vicinity of his own goal line several times—Nearly every best traveled to midfield * * * The boys in the press box, including Tay Brown, former USC all-American tackle, Angus King, coach of Cincinnati Withrow and scouting for his brother, Dean, who coaches Cincinnati university; Butch Grover, Ohio U. coach and scout, and several others were high in their praise of White's kicking * * *

SAVATSKY TOUGH

He made Wesleyan's only long runs of the day getting away for 15 and 18 yards—Inability of his blockers to move the Miami end, Savatsky, prevented Whitey from going farther more often—Dean, brother of the Bishop, veteran played part of the second half for the winners * * *

PREDICTION'S BLASTED

The Second Guesser made 17 guesses on Saturday's games and the results were not so hot—Ten were correct; they were Ohio over Reserve; Cincinnati over Marshall; Wesleyan over Miami; Pitt over Notre Dame; Michigan state over Marquette; Minnesota over Michigan; Princeton over Harvard; Navy over Washington and commission on county government, will be submitted to the governor shortly before Thanksgiving.

The report will contain three broad plans for reforms of county governments and will include a draft on proposed state legislation through which the three systems would be made available and optional to all counties throughout the state.

The systems to be recommended in the report are:

1. County manager.
2. Elective executives.
3. A set-up similar to that of a large school district.

Details of the plans are being carefully guarded by members of the commission prior to the publication of the report. The report is now more than half written, with parts of it being printed.

FOLLOW CITY STYLE
It was understood, however, that the county manager plan would follow the city manager system of government. The elective executives plan probably will parallel the present county commissioner system, the elective executives being given more central powers.

The third plan, probably the most revolutionary of the three in the report, would provide a single executive at the head of a county. He would be aided by assistants and an advisory council of some nature, following the plan of school districts with a school superintendent and board of education.

A STATEMENT to the Public from Ed. Wallace's Bakery Concerning their "NEW" Bread

As each day passes we strive to make our bread just a little better in some way. If new equipment is obtainable that will improve our product, we get it.

In the last two months we have purchased new pans and new machinery and as a result we are now making one of the BEST loaves of bread we have EVER offered the public. This new machinery was bought purposely to bring you this new loaf of bread. A new formula is now used in making our bread, and entirely new methods are employed that has never been used in this locality before. It is not only different in texture but it has more body and a finer taste than ever. This new bread also makes a better toast than ever before. Try a slice or two toasted one of these cool mornings and we feel sure you'll agree with us that it is BETTER!

At this time, too, we are pleased to announce that Mr. Harry Van Trees, formerly of Indianapolis, Ind., is now superintendent in charge of baking in our plant. He has had many years of experience in this line of work and he is chiefly responsible for the altogether different type of bread we are now baking.

We Want You to Try Our NEW Bread!
All of our Bread is made by this New Method

Support the Democratic Candidates (An Editorial)

Pickaway-co's voters will go to the polls Tuesday to elect a corps of county officials as well as play their part in the selection of a governor, various administrative heads of the state government, a congressman, representative to the General Assembly and several state, district and local judges.

With the Democratic party this year presenting a fine slate of candidates for every office from governor to coroner, the matter of success lies in getting the Democratic vote to the polls.

By Democratic vote is not meant just those partisans who are usually Democrats, but along with them the men and women who are independent voters and Republicans who progressively recognize that the Democratic party is the people's party.

The Herald believes it is a newspaper's duty to speak its mind about candidates for public office. And because we believe that Ohio and Pickaway-co will be better served by the Democratic candidates, The Herald is endorsing the entire Democratic slate.

A careful examination of both party tickets has revealed to The Herald that the election of the Democratic slate will insure our county and state of a straight-forward, honest and efficient administration of government during the next two years.

At the head of its ticket, the Democrats have placed Martin L. Davey, a shrewd, business-like candidate, who is characterized by his frank and straight-forward manner of speaking on all important questions of the day. His experience as a legislator for 12 years in Congress and his many years of business activity combine to make him worthy of the trust of being governor of Ohio.

Vic Donahey will undoubtedly be elected to the U. S. Senate. The Herald believes that his record entitles him to be elected.

Congressman Mell G. Underwood deserves re-election. He has served his district well and has never lost sight of the fact that he is a representative of the people.

Each of the other Democratic state candidates is well-fitted for the job asked. All of them should be supported.

In the county the Democratic ticket presents a list of worthy candidates and each should be elected. Those who are up for re-election have served the county well and their majorities at the election Tuesday should be large ones.

It is now the duty of every Democrat to go to the polls Tuesday and vote the straight Democratic ticket.

When this is done victory is certain and Pickaway-co will remain in the Democratic fold where it should always remain.

DEATH SONG

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

CHAPTER XXXVI

I listened dazedly as the sheriff called Birch Cottage, to which James Ruxton had moved. I heard him repeat to Ruxton the damning indictment which the banker's incredulous, then fearful, protests. If Loren were convicted, I thought, James Ruxton would not want to live.

When the sheriff had hung up, he said, "He asked me to wait here a few minutes until he can get dressed and come up."

Mark nodded. He stared at the ceiling, as if his mind were far away. Then abruptly he snapped, "Don't wait for him!" he cried.

The sheriff stared at him. "Go down to his cottage!" Mark said frantically. "If you want to save his life, get right down there!"

"What do you mean?" Finn demanded.

"For heaven's sake, don't argue," Mark cried. "Oh, Lord, if I had a pair of legs! Leave Loren with John, and get right down there!"

His conviction was so compelling that I started from the room. As I opened the door Loren cursed Mark and leaped at him. John Calvert caught his arms. I ran down the corridor, the sheriff after me. In the hot sunshine, we panted across the lawn to Birch Cottage.

When we opened the door of his room, James Ruxton was sitting at his desk, in pajamas and dressing gown, writing and looking so weary. His face was ghastly. He seized a revolver on the leaf of the desk.

Finn's lunge carried him across the room, crashing into Ruxton's chair. The two men fell to the floor, the revolver went spinning against the wall. Running after them, I looked at the sheet of paper on the desk. On it Ruxton had written:

"I, James Ruxton, killed Seifert Vail. I did it to save the life of my nephew, Loren. For Vail would most certainly have killed him had he learned—"

"I must be developing a conscience," Mark said. "I'm still feeling mean about the trick I played on Loren. But I had to do it. The only way I could reach Ruxton was through that boy who meant more to him than anything else in the world."

He lay back on his pillows, watching the sun go down behind the mountains. Supper was over, and it was growing very dark on the porch where Sue, John Calvert, the sheriff and I sat with him. A robin was singing its evening song; for the first time since Seifert Vail was killed, the end of day brought rest and tranquility.

Ruxton, who was in the county jail at Cold Valley. He had dictated and signed a complete confession.

"There's a lot of things I want to know," Finn said. "The first one is how you knew Loren was the fellow who stole Vail's wife."

"The day after the murder," Mark answered. "I learned that Loren spoke Spanish, and I tried mine out on him. He told me he picked up the language in Cuba, but he used two words that you never hear in Cuba."

He called Felipe 'una cumbria' and 'maldita', meaning a young lady who is a compendium of all the feminine virtues. A Cuban would have said 'contundente' never 'formidable'.

And Loren used the Catalan slang word 'noy' meaning 'fellow' or 'old boy'. Obviously, he was trying to conceal the fact that he had lived in Catalonia.

"When the Montague woman told us that Francine Vail and her lover had run off to Barcelona, I knew why. Of course, long before that I'd been suspicious of his unkindness."

"But why did you suspect him?" Sue asked. "It still seems unbelievable to me that a man like Mr. Ruxton could commit two such terrible murders."

"Perhaps if he hadn't been a sick man, he wouldn't have been a murderer," John Calvert said.

"You're almost as smart as I am," Mark said. "James Ruxton isn't legally insane, but acute melancholia darkens his whole outlook on life. The one thing he wanted to do before he died was to assure Loren's happiness. He turned to the sheriff. 'When I talked you into arresting Loren, for which I hope you'll pardon me—'

"You didn't fool me," Finn broke in. "I had a pretty good idea what you were up to."

We all laughed, and he turned on us resentfully.

"Now, Mr. Finn!" Sue said.

His frown became a sheepish, embarrassed grin. "All right, all right," he grumbled. "If you think I was fooled, let it go at that."

"When I accused Loren," Mark went on, "I attributed to him all the fears that drove his uncle to murder Vail. James Ruxton learned who Seifert Vail was, and undoubtedly he tried to persuade Loren to stop visiting him. But Loren had met Sue, and he couldn't stay away."

"James Ruxton's greatest desire, then, was to see him married and safely away. Undoubtedly Loren would have been in real danger if Vail discovered who he was. James Ruxton's morbid imagination exaggerated that danger until it came a fear that haunted him all ways."

"He became obsessed by the idea that there was disaster ahead and that he might have to kill Vail to save Loren. And because he was so cautious, facing such a possibility. When Vail asked him to exchange rooms, Ruxton learned from him that he was expecting a visit from his wife. To James Ruxton, there seemed nothing to do but to carry out his mad plan of murder."

"You haven't answered Sue's question, Mark," Dr. Calvert said. "All that is quite clear now, but why did you first suspect Ruxton?"

"There were several things. The first was a cold in the chest."

"A few days after Joe Barker was found drowned, it was discovered that Ruxton had been trying to conceal the fact that he had caught cold. His explanation was that he had an engagement to go out to see Loren. Sue and Loren, and he didn't want to miss it. He looked quizzically at his useless legs."

"I can quite understand what a rare privilege that would be for anyone here—to get out of the sanatorium for an evening—but it seemed to me that to a man as careful as Ruxton, health would come first."

"It was apparent by that time that Joe had neither drowned accidentally nor committed suicide. He had been murdered. It seemed to be a singularly cold-blooded and unnecessary crime. Why would anyone want to kill Joe?"

"Only to make it appear that Joe was guilty and had committed suicide, to close the investigation and get rid of the sheriff. But we were getting nowhere, and no one except a man harassed by unreasonable fears, and such a thing."

"It was not difficult for Ruxton to speak to Joe during the one day the gardener was at liberty and to persuade him that Felipe had drowned herself in the lake because she was jealous of Loren."

"Poor, simple-minded Joe! Believing him, he sneaked out of his room, got the grappling hook from the tool shed and went out at night to help Ruxton drag the lake."

"Ruxton simply pushed him overboard, trusting in the grappling hook to hold him. But it didn't, and he was pulled up by the boat, and Ruxton had to break his finger to beat him off. During that grim adventure, Ruxton became chilled and caught cold. Then, being too careful again, he tried to conceal it from someone who would leap to the improbable conclusion that he had caught it drowning."

"We were silent for a minute and then I asked, 'Was that all the proof you had, Mark?'"

"Oh, no," he said. "I found plenty more when I began to consider Ruxton as a possibility. He lit a cigarette. 'The most logical suspects, of course, were the surviving patients in Lakeside Cottage. Cross was too afraid of hurting his precious heart to commit a murder. Much he hated Vail, the gardener's lack of the courage. Only Ruxton seemed to me to combine the intelligence, physical capacity, strength of will and especially the caution of the murderer.'

"It was evident that the murderer was a patient, confined to the sanatorium grounds but able to move around freely during exercise periods, as Ruxton was. The proof of that was the murderer's taste in weapons. A pair of hedge shears! What a clumsy, ridiculous instrument of murder! If they hadn't been found with the gardener's overalls, they would have seemed completely fantastic. How much easier for the murderer to conceal a knife under the overalls. Obviously the author of the crime had to build it out of such materials as he could find here."

He turned to John Calvert with a smile. "That eliminated you, with a hundred nice, sharp surgeon's knives to choose from, and Loren, who could easily have gone to New York and picked up a pocket weapon. Of course, the two of you complicated the case as much as you could, but I'll forgive you for that."

"Stupid of me," John Calvert said. "I should have had as much confidence in your intelligence as you have."

"Strangely enough," Mark went on, "Clendening, with his childish idea that there was some code message in the words of 'Waiting For You,' with his everlasting nosiness, helped to pin the murder on Ruxton. The way he peeped dead from excitement, he found outside the cottage the button which was missing from the overalls. Did Ruxton tell you where he put the overalls after the murder?"

Finn nodded. "He went back to his room, took them off, shoved them under the porch and then climbed back through his window. That night he dropped them in the lake."

"The fact that the button was found so near the cottage pointed again to someone who lived there. If the murderer had been from any other part of the sanatorium he wouldn't have taken off his disguise and walked home in plain sight without it."

"Ruxton realized that, and again he tried to be too careful. He insisted that someone had attacked Clendening, or at least frightened him. He said that because, for once, he had an alibi. Cross had been in the room with him when Clendening died."

"There was one final thing. If, as I believed, the murderer had some connection with the visit Vail expected and with the phonograph record that was playing when he was found, then Ruxton had to be the murderer—for he was admittedly the only person who knew why Vail asked to change rooms with him."

"Once we found the Montague woman and established Loren's connection with Vail, it was perfectly clear, but I had to frame Loren so that you, sheriff, believed the story. It sounded plausible enough, and you and his own fears convinced Ruxton. He saw everything falling to pieces. He had killed to save Loren, and now Loren himself was accused, and there seemed to be a damnable complete circumstantial case against him. There was nothing for Ruxton to do but confess as he did, but write a confession and kill himself while we waited for him in my room."

"When I told of the attempt on my life, Loren realized what I was doing. Did you see the look of horror on his face? He said, 'I'll let his uncle that Bob was going to the city, and when I accused him, he knew that his uncle was a murderer.'"

Finn stood up. "Well," he said, "I'm glad we got a confession. I'd have had to go to court without one." He pulled a cigar from his pocket and reflectively bit off the end. "I promised the reporters a story, and now I got it."

"Don't use my name!" Mark said. "What? I'm here on your back and solve a murder, and don't want any credit for it?"

Mark grinned. "And have reporters bothering me for a month? No, that grief goes with your job. The credit's all yours. I hope it gets you into the assembly."

Finn squeezed Mark's hand. He said warmly, "If I'm elected and you ever need anything, you know where to come!"

John and Sue arose as the sheriff left. "It's my turn to thank you now," the doctor said. "Mark—"

"I'll let Sue thank me for both of you," Mark said. "Come here, sweetheart, and give us one last kiss."

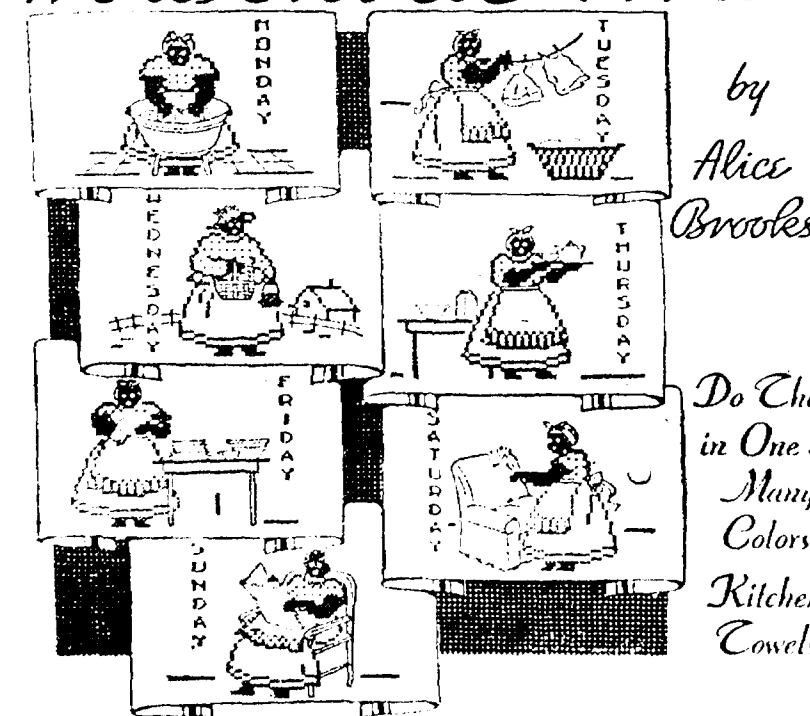

She walked to him proudly and put her arm around him. When she straightened up, Mark said gayly, "I get another at the wedding, don't I? John, you big oaf, the moon's risen. Take Sue for a walk. You've got a lot of time to make up."

"When they had gone, I said, 'Your murder mystery's over, and your nurse is going to marry the doctor. Where does that leave you?'"

"Right in bed where I started," Mark said. He leaned toward me, and his eyes were gleaming. "I've got a swag of an idea for my next play. Bob. Listen."

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA
The generations of people both young and old who have been thrilled by "Treasure Island," Robert Louis Stevenson's famous story of pirate adventure, will find the vivid story-book experiences of their youth created on the screen in the picture that opened yesterday at the Cliftona Theatre, with Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in co-starring roles.

Full power of the most widely read fiction book about pirates ever written has been retained in the adaptation by John Lee Mahin. Scenes have been reproduced exactly as described in the book much of Stevenson's own dialogue between the characters followed to the word.

With Beery as Long John Silver and Jackie Cooper as Jim Hawkins, boy adventurer, a cast has been assembled to bring each rover of the Spanish Main to the screen with living reality.

SHE'S FREE ANYWAY
ATLANTA, Ga.—Bessie Young cannot have a divorce, the reason being, in the decision of the state supreme court, that she hasn't been married. The high court reversed a decision of a superior judge awarding Miss Young a "divorce" decree from Cleveland Simpson. She wanted alimony, too.

PATTERN 9187
It's buttoned up the back like Mainbocher's Butcher Boy design—and it's shirred round the neck and the tops of the sleeves like Lanvin's peasant blouse. What more could you ask of this gracefully-molded tunic? The skirt proves its sisterhood with latest fashion by being slim as a reed and slashed at the hemline. Make up the two in contrasting colors and fabrics, a green velvet skirt.

perhaps, with a honey-colored satin blouse. Of if you'd like a very dressy frock, choose a metal-flecked crepe for both blouse and skirt. Then top it all off with a high toque for an extra bit of glamor!

Hardening of Arteries Is Due to Faulty Living

Particularly in Cases of Premature "Arterio sclerosis", Says Authority

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

AS WE GROW old the arteries become hard. The heart is weakened and the delicate mechanism of the body becomes impaired. It is unable to carry on as it formerly did.

Somebody has said that the arteries are like old pipes. As we grow old and suffer from hardening of the arteries long before it is time. To explain these changes it is necessary to go somewhat into detail.

The circulation of the blood is accomplished by a central pumping station, the heart; the distributing system, or arteries; the terminal endings of the arterial system within all the tissues, called capillaries; and the collecting system, or veins. Each part of the circulation system is dependent upon all the others. An injury or disease of one part will affect the entire system.

Like Pipelines
The blood vessels are often called pipelines. The walls of these pipes are made of elastic and muscular tissue. They contract and expand. With each beat of the heart there is created a propulsion which maintains the necessary pressure, forcing the blood on its way. This causes its circulation throughout the body.

These pipes are resistant to the changes and strains experienced by the body. As long as their health and strength are maintained, they are equal to all emergencies. If they become diseased they are unable to do so. They soon weaken and become inefficient.

Hardening of the arteries or "arteriosclerosis," as it is termed medically, is the most common disease of these vessels. In this condition the arteries lose their elasticity because of the muscular and elastic tissue of their walls is replaced with inelastic connective tissue. As the disease progresses, deposits of lime are laid down in the walls of the vessels and they become hard and brittle.

May Follow Infectious Disease
When these changes occur the blood vessels no longer assist in the circulation of blood. In fact, by the narrowing of their calibre, they retard the flow of blood, placing additional work on the heart. The blood being restricted by the lessened space within the vessels, is under greater pressure. Since the vessels are brittle and inelastic they are liable to rupture under the progressive increase of blood pressure. No longer are they able to resist strain.

The fundamental cause of hardening of the arteries in fairly young individuals is difficult to explain. It is probably the result of intense and faulty living, undue nervous strain, over-eating and other personal faults.

Certain infectious diseases, such as typhoid fever, pneumonia and tuberculosis, are often followed by hardening of the arteries. Localized infections, the result of diseased tonsils, infected teeth and nasal sinuses are other factors that must not be overlooked. Correction of underlying physical defects, with a well ordered life, will prevent premature hardening of the arteries.

Answers to Health Queries
Miss T. E. W. Q.—Will you please advise me what causes an excessive amount of electricity in the body?
A.—The condition you describe is not an unusual one and is normal. (Copyright, 1934, K. E. E. Inc.)

Hauptmann's Defense Lawyers

Robert H. McCarter

Edward J. Reilly

In charge of the defense battle for Bruno Richard Hauptmann when the latter is tried on murder charges in connection with the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby probably will be Robert H. McCarter, left, of Newark, N. J., and Edward J. Reilly, right, of New York City. Reilly, well-known criminal lawyer, already has been retained, and McCarter, chief of the defense counsel in the celebrated Hall-Mills case, will be asked to join the Hauptmann legal forces.

error of New York, and when Moley was serving on his crime commission.

Professor Tugwell happened to get into the picture because he lived near Moley at Columbia University. Moley asked him to work out some economic ideas for Roosevelt.

Adolf Berle happened to join the group because he gave a talk at the Harvard Club one night; afterward drafted a memorandum of the discussion and sent it to those who were present. One of them happened to show it to Moley. Another to Colonel House. Both showed it to the Presidential candidate.

"I'd like to meet that man," said Roosevelt. So Berle was initiated into the Brain Trust.

Later he brought with him Charles Tausig for whom Berle served as attorney.

Thus the family grew. And in somewhat the same way, the past year has seen the little group gradually disintegrate.

PICKAWAY-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

MUSIC NOTES

The music department is proud to announce that a 1934 graduate of our school, James Rader, who is now a freshman at Wittenberg College at Springfield, Ohio, was chosen as a member of the trombone section of both the Band and Orchestra at this college.

His admission to these groups came as a result of being the winner over several other students in a series of competitive tryouts for the position.

John Stuckey, a member of the freshman class, is beginning lessons on the trombone and we hope to have him as a member of the school orchestra before long.

The music classes from the sixth grade through the High School have an opportunity to hear the Young People's concert to be given on November 13, by the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra.

We are hoping that many students will be interested in making this trip to Columbus.

ART NOTES

The art classes are completing their Halloween problems this week in all the grades.

Masks, posters and window decorations are being made using the mediums of cut paper and crayon. Pattern work is being done only in the first two grades.

Even the second grade designed their own masks.

NEW DEAL FACES TEST IN TUESDAY VOTING

G. O. P. Hopes to Gain in House

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—An off-year campaign that has been apathetic in many states and red-hot in others came to a close today with the Democrats certain of retaining control of both branches of Congress, and the Republicans hopeful only of making an impressive showing against the New Deal.

By common consent the New Deal is the single outstanding issue, so far as there can be said to be one. Yet the Republicans are resigned to its continuance.

30 MILLIONS TO VOTE
Registration the country over is at an unprecedented peak, totaling almost 45,000,000. Yet the leaders on both sides will be surprised tomorrow if the vote exceeds 30,000,000, or about 10,000,000 short of the record vote piled up in the Roosevelt-Hoover campaign of two years ago.

The vote tomorrow will determine the make-up of the 74th Congress, decide the political complexion of 33 state governments, through election of governors and state legislatures, and fill thousands of lesser offices, from mayor to township trustee.

Its greater significance, however, is the light it will throw on the temper of the country toward the history-making acts of the Roosevelt New Deal, as viewed in terms of the more important election in 1936.

The leaders on both sides are more interested in the phase of tomorrow's balloting than they are in the fate of individuals. As Henry A. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, described it: "This is but the preliminary skirmish in the battle of 1936." Meaning that the Republicans have no hope of upsetting Democratic control of the government at this time.

It has been a curious campaign in many respects. President Roosevelt has made no political speeches, and steadfastly refrained from endorsing any candidates save in his own state of New York, where an eleven-hour White House blessing was given Gov. Herbert H. Lehman. Ex-President Herbert Hoover, still titular leader of the Republican party, has been conspicuously silent.

In the House, Republican chances for gains are distinctly better. The present House line-up is 309 Democrats, 114 Republicans, 5 Farmer-Laborites, with 7 vacancies. Thus, the Republicans would have to pick up just short of 100 seats to gain numerical control, and that, they admit, is hopeless.

TRAFFIC TAKES 10

By International News Service

With thousands of Ohioans taking to the highways to enjoy what may be the last "perfect" day for joy riding this year, at least ten lives were snuffed out in violent accidents in the state over the week-end, a checkup by International News Service revealed today.

Miss Leona Kuntz, 24, and Royal Adams, 23, both of Chillicothe, were killed when their auto collided with a truck near Ironton.

O. Bernard Crabtree, 10, died in a Gallipolis hospital from injuries received in a traffic accident, and Thomas O'Hare, 45, of Washington C. H., was struck and killed while walking on a highway 10 miles east of Washington C. H.

TRAFFIC TAKES 10

By International News Service

With thousands of Ohioans taking to the highways to enjoy what may be the last "perfect" day for joy riding this year, at least ten lives were snuffed out in violent accidents in the state over the week-end, a checkup by International News Service revealed today.

Miss Leona Kuntz, 24, and Royal Adams, 23, both of Chillicothe, were killed when their auto collided with a truck near Ironton.

O. Bernard Crabtree, 10, died in a Gallipolis hospital from injuries received in a traffic accident, and Thomas O'Hare, 45, of Washington C. H., was struck and killed while walking on a highway 10 miles east of Washington C. H.

campaigns Saturday evening with a rally at Memorial Hall with Paul Herbert, candidate for lieutenant governor, as the principal speaker. District and county candidates were also present with vocal music provided by the Franklin County Republican club's chorus.

The voters of Ohio will determine whether Republican Simon Fess, arch foe of the Rooseveltian "New Deal," is to return to the U. S. senate for six more years or whether his senate seat will be occupied henceforth by Democrat Vic Donahey, who promises to "support the President, in every proper manner."

It also will determine whether Ohio's next governor will be Clarence J. Brown, Republican, who at the age of 28 became this state's youngest lieutenant governor—he is now 41, or whether the Democrats will continue to hold the reins of state government for another two years, with Martin L. Davey, tree surgeon and former congressman, in the driver's seat.

CONCEDE TO DONAHEY

Practically every political prognosticator in the state picked Donahey to win over Fess, who also has come out on the short end of all the newspaper straw vote polls taking in the entire state.

The seers said the defeat they anticipated for Fess would be due not so much to his outspoken objection to the "New Deal" as to the great personal popularity of Donahey.

But that did not discourage the veteran Fess who has spent 22 consecutive years in the two houses of Congress.

"I am always beaten by straw votes, and elected by ballots," he said as he returned to his home in Yellow Springs after campaigning in every corner of the state.

The senator will drive to Columbus this afternoon to make his final appeal for re-election in a statewide radio broadcast.

Donahey, winner of the Democratic nomination over the avowed "New Deal" candidate, Congressman Charles West, and over Gov. George White, still suffered from a severe cold and remained in the seclusion of his home at Indian Lake.

Back in his home county, Davey wound up his campaign with speeches in Kent and Ravenna, while Brown, rounded out his third consecutive day in Cleveland with several campaign addresses.

Democratic state headquarters predicted victory for Donahey by a 300,000 majority, for Davey by a 175,000 majority. Republican headquarters said Brown would carry 66 of Ohio 88 counties to win by 150,000. Fess will be re-elected, H. E. Griffith, G. O. P. campaign manager, predicted but he offered no estimate of his anticipated margin of victory.

VOTE ON 22

Ohio will elect 22 district congressmen and two congressmen-at-large. The general belief was that the Republicans would pick up several new seats, but few unbiased observers agreed with Griffith that eight would be gained. Most forecasters thought a gain of four seats by the Republicans would be more nearly correct.

Because white flowers are unable to attract by their color the insects which would pollinate them they are often strongly scented.

who was first to greet and congratulate him on his memorable flight.

"I was only a spare part of the trip," Sir Charles added. "Bill (his navigator) did all the work. Anybody can get into a plane and fly. But it takes great skill to pick out the little dots on the map and find them, to hit them on the head as we did on this trip. That's the work my navigator did and we hit every little dot."

"I've got the best airplane in the world," Sir Charles boasted. "From the time of the takeoff at Honolulu, we had no trouble except for 15 minutes about 11 o'clock Saturday night when we bumped into a rainstorm. That necessitated a short period of blind flying."

"I don't remember what our position was at the time, but it was nothing like that 8,500-foot spin on our flight from Suva to Honolulu when the plane's wing flaps fell down."

"I flew at the start at an altitude of 6,000 feet, and then went between 7,000 and 12,000 feet the rest of the way."

"We started out at 140 miles an hour, then hopped up to 180 miles and flew the last quarter of the flight at 125 miles an hour."

NOT COMMERCIAL ROUTE

Sir Charles declared he did not believe the time was ripe for a commercial airline over the route he had just flown.

"With the ships we have now," Sir Charles said, "by the time we have taken enough gasoline aboard for the long hops there is no margin left for a pay load sufficient to make a commercial proposition profitable. It will come eventually, but not for some time."

He said he did not favor use of dirigibles as he believed their initial costs too high and the pay load too small.

While the two flyers rested in seclusion today plans went forward for a banquet tonight when 200 Los Angeles dignitaries will honor Sir Charles and his companion at a banquet.

RE-ELECT PAUL R. GINGHER For STATE SENATOR

NOTE THE FOLLOWING EXCERPTS ABOUT HIM AS STATE SENATOR

"It has taken only a few months for Senator Paul R. Gingher of Columbus to progress from a legislative neophyte to one of the most outstanding members of the General Assembly. Ask any close observer of the workings of the Legislature about Paul Gingher and you will hear how he has come to be regarded as the bad-rock of that sometimes turbulent body, the Ohio Senate." Karl B. Pauly, Feature Writer for The Ohio State Journal.

"Senator Paul R. Gingher, Franklin County, has attracted attention as being the smoothest member in presenting a case to the Senate. The job is certain to be done logically and tactfully." Herbert R. Mengert in The Cincinnati Enquirer.

"In addition to being a quiet, forceful and dignified man on his feet as a Senator, he is a firm, capable and courteous official behind the gavel." Gongwer Legislative Reports.
